JOINING THE OFF CAMPUS B.S.PROGRAM

To those interested in joining the off-campus program, most students with 50 or more transferable lower division junior college units qualify for the program, as long as they are employed by any unit or level of government. Registration and payment for classes is usually submitted during the first or second class meeting, but these may also be submitted or sent directly to the Division of Continuing and Global Education at CSU Fresno. New students should also read program information and complete the off campus program application linked to the program website at:

http://zimmer.csufresno.edu/~haralds/downtowndegreeoverview.htm

If pressed for time, new applicants can simply attend the first new classes beginning in April and bring along copies of transcripts showing prior college coursework.

The total cost for each 3-unit cost is $570, not including any required textbooks. Faculty teaching the courses have a flexible approach to accommodate students who experience work related issues which preclude them from attending every class session. Blackboard and other on-line based work assignments and research is used extensively by faculty. Internet use is essential.

OFF CAMPUS GRADUATE PROGRAM

All 17 students in the Off-Campus Criminology graduate program cohort have successfully completed their first 9 graduate units and are currently taking the Advanced Criminological Theory course with Dr. T. Dupont-Morales.

Police Mascots

Mascots provide an ideal medium for conveying trust between police and the public, and are used by agencies across the globe to develop or maintain a positive image. Above a montage of a German police mascot from the state of Baden-Würtemberg meeting a police mascot from Miyazaki prefecture, Japan. The Geman mascot is already wearing the new “blue” uniform mandated for all police in the European Union. The Japanese mascot is wearing the traditional police uniform from 1900.

The emblem between the mascots consists of the official insignia for the Karlsruhe, Germany section of the International Police Association (IPA).

NOTE: Germany has more IPA members than any other country in the world.
POLICE MASCOTS...

The Japanese mascot is ever present when dealing with police and the mascot is seen on police business cards, recruitment posters, police web pages, etc.

The Carbon Motors Corporation has recently made headlines with its prototype futuristic police vehicle that is “purpose built” to withstand the physical abuse and wide range of operational law enforcement activities. The corporation breaks with the tradition of simply modifying an existing passenger vehicle to meet law enforcement needs by designing it from the ground up.

Typical everyday police activities such as get in and out of the police car with a literal supply and equipment chest hanging on your Sam Browne belt, securing prisoners in the rear seat, bracing for rear end collisions (drunk drivers are attracted to flashing lights and have a habit of running into the rear of police vehicle), exposure to flying projectiles such as bullets, running into curbs at high rates of speed, dealing with bodily discharges of arrestees in the rear seat, and a host of other challenges faced by motorized police officers around the world, were all considered in the design and construction of this police vehicle. An important safety feature is the rear impact protection up to 70mph, which compensates for drunk drivers who are attracted to flashing lights and have a habit of running into the rear of police cars. (I witnessed just such an event while working as a police officer)

Following are additional photos of the vehicle interior. Carbon Motors was gracious enough to permit the use of their web based photos in this newsletter. It is also recommended that readers access the company’s website for a more extensive and detailed description of the Carbon Motors Police Vehicle. Carbon Motors Police Vehicle...

The vehicle’s performance features are extraordinary, to say the least, and together with the innovations in design, appear to address every major and minor complaint I have ever had about my police unit (vehicle) while working as a patrol officer.

Events in History

Chicago gang wars during the American Prohibition resulted in the now infamous execution style slaying of six members of the Bugsy Moran gang on Valentine’s Day in 1929. These murders were dubbed the “Valentine’s Day” massacre, and while there was little doubt that Al Capone was responsible for the killings, there was a lack of evidence to connect him to the massacre. Valentine’s Day last month (February) was the 80th anniversary of the massacre. While everyone involved is since deceased, the event in which six gang members and a seventh person were murdered, became part of Chicago’s history. The killings resulted in the supremacy of Al Capone’s rule in Chicago’s underworld.

The massacre led to different legends about the warehouse where the killings occurred, and the bricks from the wall where the men were lined up and shot were sold for $1000 each. The new owners, however, were said to suddenly experience all kinds of personal disaster, including divorces, serious illnesses and premature death. The bricks were thought to contain a curse and the owners quickly passed them on to others to avoid personal tragedy.

Al Capone was ultimately arrested and convicted for tax evasion, due to a meticulous investigation by Eliot Ness, a Prohibition Agent under the Department of the Treasury. You can view a photocopy of the original Chicago police report of the Valentine’s Day massacre on Dr. Schweizer’s web page at:

http://zimmer.csufresno.edu/~haralds/Valentine.html

This photocopy is not accessible anywhere else on the Web until, of course, it is copied from Dr. Schweizer’s website and posted elsewhere.

VALENTINE’S DAY MASSACRE...

While the FBI did not have jurisdiction in the Chicago Valentine’s Day massacre, the Bureau provided some investigative assistance. You can view some of the related documents at the FBI’s website using the links below:

It is interesting to note that in a TV series about the FBI, Robert Stack played agent Eliot Ness, even though Ness was never an FBI agent.

Following is a copy of Eliot Ness’ original ID card, more commonly referred to as “credentials.” The ID is opened up reveals the credentials consisting of two sections as can be seen.

FACULTY PRESENTATION AT INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE

Dr. Takahashi attended the March 09 Annual Meeting of the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences in Boston, MA and presented a paper/research on the topic of: Who Is in Jail? Exploring Characteristics of the Fresno County, California, Jail Population. The paper was the result of a collaborative research effort by, Dr. M.J. Kissner, Dr. E. Hughes, and Dr. Takahashi.
Four Oakland, CA police officers, SGT Mark DUNAKIN, SGT Erv ROMANS, SGT Daniel SAKAI and Officer John HEGE, were shot and killed on 21/22 March 2009 by Lovelle MIXON, a wanted parolee who was also under investigation for sexual assault. The shooting began during a traffic stop during which MIXON killed the first two officers, and later continued in an apartment complex where MIXON shot the other two officers during an exchange of gunfire with a police SWAT team. We mourn for these officers, their families, and the Oakland Police Department.
