Swedish Cartoonist threatened with Death

Abu Omar al-Baghdadi, leader of the so-called Islamic State in Iraq, has announced a reward for the murder of Swedish cartoonist Lars Vilks over his drawing depicting the prophet’s head on the body of a dog. Al-Baghdadi offered $100,000 for his murder and $150,000 if Vilks is slaughtered like a lamb. The Swedish newspaper Nerikes Allehanda had published the drawing to defend the right to freedom of speech. (Source: Al Jazeera)
CRIMINOLOGY DEPARTMENT NEWS

Dr. K. J. Ryan has written an article on Federalism, Inter-governmentalism, and Intelligence for Oxford University’s Journal on Public Policy. The article will be published in the October issue of the journal.

Criminology department faculty and students are encouraged to submit abstracts for criminology department paper presentation panels at the annual meeting of the American Association of Behavioral and Social Sciences on 7 and 8 February, 2008 in Las Vegas, NV. The deadline for submission to Dr. Schweizer is 1 October 2007. Costs and other conference information is accessible at: http://www.aabss.org

The Fresno State chapter of LAE, the national Criminal Justice Association, is traveling to Portland, OR for the annual meeting from 8-10 November.

FRAUD EXPERT COMING TO FRESNO

Kriminalhauptkommissar Michael Böhl of the Fraud Division (Dir 6VBIII4) of the Berlin, Germany Police Department will be sharing his experiences, insight, and current challenges in fraud investigation.

The two hour presentation will be held at the Fresno Police Department in March 2008, and is open to law enforcement only. Additional details will be announced by December 2007.

KHK (CPT) BÖHL has been with the Berlin police for more than 25 years and experienced the transition from two police departments in a divided city to a unified police for one Berlin. Berlin is the capital city of Germany and has more than 18,000 police officers, including 3,525 detectives.

KHK Böhl is also the BdK representative for Berlin. The BdK is the federation of German Criminal Police (Kriminalpolizei). In addition to representing police criminal investigators (Kriminalpolizei) country-wide, the Bund deutscher Kriminalbeamter (BdK) also advises the federal government in legislative matters dealing with crime and criminal law. (https://www.bdk.de/index.php)

Berlin is a major hub for transnational organized crime and KHK Böhl has extensive experience in the investigation of criminal groups from the former Soviet Union. Last year KHK Böhl was featured in an article on transnational crime and the circumvention of immigration laws, published in the German news magazine FOCUS.
Spotlight Japan

Japanese Police are first assigned to a Koban after graduation from the police academy. These neighborhood police posts are the backbone of policing in Japan, and typically serve 8,000-15,000 residents. Another type of police post is the Chuzaisho, which combines a police office with the officer’s residence. All Chuzaisho officers are married and many have children. With only one officer responsible for a community, the spouses also assist in the functioning of the police post. Below is such a Chuzaisho on Iō Island in Nagasaki Prefecture.

Chuzaisho officers are integrated into the community and participate in all community activities. Dr. Schweizer interviewed the officer in the above police post and found that the 40 year old officer loved his assignment and thrived on the daily interaction with community members.

Circumventing gambling laws in Japan
Betting or playing games of chance to win money is against Japanese law. At the same time, any visitor to Japan will see Pachinko parlors in nearly every prefecture and every city. Pachinko is a game involving steel balls in something that looks like an upright pin pall machine. Pachinko parlors are frequent by heavy smokers and the noise level from the machines is deafening.

Players can win points that can be changed into goods such as cigarettes, candy, electronic items, etc., in the Pachinko parlor.

DOWNTOWN CRIMINOLOGY DEGREE PROGRAM

Two new classes are scheduled to begin this October. Any employee of city, county, state, or federal governments with about two years of prior college coursework can join the downtown degree program any time new classes begin. The program is designed to allow students to complete all of their upper division degree requirements for the B.S. degree in Criminology with an emphasis in law enforcement, within two years from the time they begin classes. Classes are held at the Fresno Police Department Annex downstairs training room on Monday and Wednesday evenings, and two Saturdays per course.

Dr. Schweizer, the coordinator of the downtown program, will have an information table in the lobby of the Fresno City Hall Annex at 2326 FRESNO STREET between M and N street on Wednesday, 26 Sept. from 1600-1800.
